All the rooms of the White House will be accessible to the public during the coming summer for the first time in many years. Before leaving Washington President Taft gave instructions that the building should be thrown wide open. As a rule only the public reception rooms are shown to visitors.

Everything else having been tried, in the feverish, almost frenzied quest of bizarre attractions, it seems to have occurred to some of the energetic theatrical managers that, after all, good acting in good old days might prove a

Shipbuilding in the United States during the fiscal year just ended shows a marked increase over the previous year. This year there were built, according to the bureau of navigation's report, 1,902 merchant vessels of 247,025 gross tons, as compared with 1,362 vessels of 232,516 gross tons the year before. Of those built during the past year, 333 were barges and canal boats; of the remainder, 1,609 being steam and 135 sailing vessels. The largest of the 15 steel ocean steamers constructed during the year was the Wilhelmnia of 6,947 tons. The schooner Wyoming, 3,730 tons, was the largest wooden vessel ever built in the United States.

Perhaps the costliest book for its size (part from ancient and rare volumes) is the official history of the South African war, the final volume of which has just been published. The four volumes contain 2,603 pages, and the total cost of producing the work was $170,000. Eight years work for many hands is represented in the book. The first volume appeared in 1906, and the second the following year, but after Volume 3 was published in 1908 nothing came out until the month of June, 1910. To obtain fullness and absolute accuracy of detail, tons of documents have been examined and arranged. They included official dispatches, officers' private letters, newspaper reports, and even the letters written home by Tommy Atkins. Not a single error in spelling the word place-names of the Transvaal or in an officers' initials has been discovered.

Arizona and New Mexico are about to take on new dignity in the eyes of the world, says the Christian Herald. Their existence as territories is drawing to a close and they will soon have State governments of their own, as President Taft has just signed the bill admitting them to full membership in the sisterhood of States. Two more stars will be added to "Old Glory" and in no part of the country will the new flag with its increased constellation be more popular or more loved than in these two progressive commonwealths of the Southwest. The two territories have been knocking for several years at the door of Congress for admittance as States. For a while it seemed as if they would have to wait some time before their cherished ambition was realized. President Taft, however, was heartily in favor of admitting them, and was greatly pleased when he was able to sign the bill providing for their statehood. Now Arizona and New Mexico must hold conventions and prepare constitutions to be submitted to Congress, and then they can start in business as self-governing commonwealths.

The naval authorities are confronted with the problem of removal from the coast of the masts of the old battleships that these masts do not fully serve that purpose for which they were intended. The platform at the top of the mast is an observation place which will aid in the determination of ranges to the target, and the masts below. The system of observation and calculation and communication is a complicated one, and much depends on the efficiency of the observers at the top of the masts. It has been insisted by some of the critics of the present system that the observers should be behind armor, with their instruments fully protected against the fire of the enemy. While the cause of the masts has been so constructed that it resists attack, and will probably survive all the successful hits likely to be made by the enemy, there is, on account of the altitude of the platform, a certain amount of vibration at the top of the masts. It is believed it would be just as well if the fire control station were located nearer the deck, and experiments are to be conducted on board the Delaware with the station on top of the conning tower.

A Boston correspondent sends us the following verses published by the New York Sun. He says that for him they exactly picture a certain merchant doing business in the little town of Tenants Harbor. We think they apply to many men doing a modest business in our down-east country villages, verses so good that all our readers will enjoy having them for their scrapbook:

THE VILLAGE MERCHANT
Upon the quiet village street,
With slanting stoop and open door,
Through which scarce shines the light of day,
Behold the simple country store.

About the door are grouped the things
Most useful for the farmer's needs:
Some rakes and hoes, and ax and spade,
Some legs of hams, on which are laid
A box or two of garden seeds.

Long shelves of canned stuffs greet the eye,
Each counter, too, is burdened well;
While fruits and spices, coffee, tea,
And scores of other things like these,
Send forth a most inviting smell.

The merchant, now a man of years,
Behind the counter sits all day,
Or labors o'er some musty book
With slow and scrutinizing look
To keep a just account all day.

Began he here when but a boy,
He looks with pride around his store;
No great commercial venture his,
Simple, honest trade it is—
He seeks enough and nothing more.

He never has been to foreign lands,
No yearning for the world's wide sea;
In honest toil he's passed his days,
In giving yet not asking praise.
On Sunday he is found at church,
A class of trusting boys is his,
And he is heard in song and prayer.

Now who succeeds him more than he,
And who more worthy of a name?
No statesman, prophet, bard or sage
In this or any future age,
Shall more deserve the name of fame.

Upon the quiet village street
This man has built his monument;
No tower of stone, a simple store,
An honest life and nothing more—
Who would not be like him, content?

SEVENTH IN SHOEMAKING

Maine Thus Ranks in an Important Industry—Warren Contributes to This Record, and Rockland Should.

The Boot and Shoe Recorder of Boston in a large fall trade number issued under date of June 29 gives considerable space to the shoe industry in Maine. The article on Maine is prepared by Gov. Fernald as follows:

Two great resources of the State of Maine stand pre-eminent. First its water powers, which are unrivaled in the United States, and second, its forests which still cover vast areas. Not only do our rivers give us abundant water supply, but what is of more importance is the constant, uniform flow. With a working population of very high average intelligence, equable climate, good railroad facilities, excellent harbors, low cost of living by reason of its farms, low cost of power and the products of the forest easily available, Maine is already a great manufacturing State.

Maine, having these very essential factors, is growing and must continue to grow in manufactures. Emerson says, "A shoemaker makes a good shoe because he makes nothing else." Maine makes other things than shoes, but there are certain locations in Maine which are at present, and have long been, successful shoe manufacturing cities and towns, where employer and employee, storekeeper and merchant talk, think and dream of shoes. In other words, these communities have, of the Transvaal or in an officers' initials has been discovered.

There are locations in Maine, therefore, not only adapted to general manufacturing, but there are locations peculiarly adapted to shoe manufacturing because in these places are found not only the conditions favorable to general manufacturing, but that great essential to successful shoe manufacturing, "Shoe Atmosphere," which can only be had in places where shoes have been made for a long time and are being made successfully.

In many of these locations shoes were made long before the invention of shoe machinery. Maine manufacturers and workmen have invented and improved many of the machines for making shoes more economically and for making better shoes. The business has grown continually and in certain places the output of shoes has doubled within the past few years. Conditions for shoe manufacturing in Maine are not only good for shoe manufacturers already here, but offer an inviting field for other shoe manufacturers to locate and to establish new shoe enterprises.

The story of the early days of shoemaking in Maine in no wise differs from those in other sections of New England. The individual shoemakers, later realizing the benefits of co-operative work, combined in teams and the little shoe shops became fixtures in many farm yards of the populous sections of the growing colony.

It was with the advent of shoe machinery that the small factory came into existence, and Maine began to take prominence in the manufacture of footwear. This was about half a century ago at which time Maine began making low-priced lines in turned and pegged shoes, and later McKays for the wholesale trade. The development of the shoe industry has been steady and constant since that time, not only with a constantly increasing output, but in improvement of quality. As the lines became strongly established, workshops were enlarged, new factories built, frequently by the aid of local co-operation and in many of these cities and towns now prosperous, it was seen that the establishment of prominent industries would not only insure but increase that prosperity. Shoe manufacturers from other states were encouraged to remove to some of these cities and towns because of the inducements offered in the exemption of taxes or the furnishing of the shoe factory buildings rent free by the commercial bodies of the towns.

The past decade has seen practically revolution in the shoe-making industry of the state of Maine. Many of the stronger houses are today selling to the retail trade direct, with specialty positions in men's and women's fine goods and in the better grade of McKays, while every shoe center shows a steady increase in the output of Good-year welts and a constant improvement in the quantities of footwear.

Today the aggregate output of footwear in the state of Maine runs into big figures. The state stands seventh in the list.

Maine is today the center of the canvas footwear industry of the United States. This industry is centered practically within the limits of the cities of Auburn and Lewiston. Canvas footwear, has become an established staple, large quantities being exported to England, Scotland and the continent to West Indies, Africa, Cuba, South America and even in the Hawaiian Islands, Austria and the Far East.

Maine has established a prestige in the manufacture of moccasins. It is harking back two centuries to the time when the American Indian was lord of vast tracts in what is now populous New England. Gradually the red man has been forced from all of these states with the exception of Maine. The Penobscot Indians, however, are still in possession of some reservations in the Pine Tree State, where their forefathers roamed the forests free for centuries before. The little Indian settlements have furnished the patterns for an important branch of the footwear industry. They were especially proficient in the art of making moccasins and examples of their work which are held today more as curiosities than for practical wear, show beauty and finish of surprisingly high order.

Their styles and workmanship have been modernized and adapted to the demands of today's civilization, and several shoe concerns have taken this old Indian moccasin as a model and are making footwear which goes to every state in the union and stands high in popularity for camping, house and seashore wear.

The ancient colors, obtained from the juices of berries and extracts from the bark of trees have given way to the modern types of coloring processes, while the varicolored beads, long associated with the Indian, are still utilized to fashion marvelously fine and intricate patterns upon the soft leather slipper tops. In the early days each Indian tribe had its own peculiar designs, and many of these have been preserved and are today found as features of ornamentation.

It may be a long call from the original foot covering of the early Indians to the modern moccasin, but the latter, full silk lined, ornamented with special emblems of secret orders and societies in pyrographic designs. Yet these are simply evidences of civilization and the progress of specialty shoemaking.

Maine is today widely known for its shoes for river drivers, guides, sportsmen and prospectors. The versatility of the manufacturers in this field of shoe-making is especially shown in several of the leading lines of the state. Careful attention has been given to the requirements of a shoe to give service to river drivers. The work where swift water and rocky bottoms make hard conditions is such that the shoe must be light, comfortable and strong. The old, rough, hard, uncomfortable shoe has given place to the shoe of strength, to sole leather in which substance, strength and toughness does not deter from flexibility, to upper stock of the finest grain, so specially tanned that it de-lays water and does not get hard, and stiff. In the modern calking likewise an improvement is noticeable, taking away from the risk of river travel.

As one views the footwear progress in Maine, he must come to a realization that this State is today producing very high grade in men's, women's and children's shoes. The adoption of the Good-year Welt process, the incorporation into lines of the newest patterns, the equipment of large modern factories with everything that can be utilized to develop and bring to a high point of excellence the finest types of shoes, these are facts regarding Maine shoe production that has compelled attention and prominence. Hundreds of salesmen are travelling up and down the country every season selling footwear made in Maine.

Of the cities of the Pine Tree State which are prominent in the quality of their footwear and the number of shoes manufactured, Auburn stands out noticeably high with nearly a dozen factories, to which might well be added the factory being separated from Auburn only by the width of the Androscoggin. South Berwick's leading industry is the manufacture of women's medium quality shoes. Gardiner is the seat of a large production of men's and boys' medium welts. Hallowell contains a factory noted for its medium priced shoes for women. Freeport has two prosperous factories turning out medium priced lines. Bangor produces many specialties in moccasins, sporting shoes, slippers and similar goods, and will soon have a big factory in operation devoted to low priced lines for the jobbing trade. Norridgewock, Norway, Richmond, Warren and Calais are notable for the production of footwear while other shoe towns swell the state's output of this industry.

While its bursting facilities its wide-awake towns and its enterprising inhabitants, with its marvelous water powers, many of them not yet developed, there are opportunities for the shoe manufacturer in Maine, it may well be considered by whoever is desirous of entering the shoe business. In many places the citizens are ready to co-operate with any manufacturer who can prove his ability to develop and maintain a prosperous shoe manufacturing industry; and there is no reason why Maine's footwear production of today should not double or treble within the next decade.

Suburban Life for July contains a splendid article about road-building. It tells how East Lampeter Township, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, transformed its unspeakable roads into ideal thoroughfares. "A Militant Country Doctor" is the title.

"The Wild Olive" is reported by the publishers, Harper & Brothers, to be the best selling novel in the United States. It was published, they announce, less than a month when it achieved this distinction. "The Wild Olive" is by the author of "The Inner Shrine," which was the best selling novel for three consecutive months last summer.

A wealth of beautiful illustrations makes Suburban Life one of the most attractive of all the July publications. It is full of interesting articles, too, many of them being particularly suitable for midsummer reading. At the same time, the utilitarian purpose of the magazine has not been overlooked, and there are many practical, how-to-do, contributions.

Justus Miles Forman, who sailed for Europe after the publication of his latest novel, "Blanca's Daughter," writes to friends that the ultimate purpose of the magazine has not been overlooked, and there are many practical, how-to-do, contributions.

"Labor in Europe and America," just published, has humor as well as fact. The author, Samuel Gompers, says he found that in England it requires "three requests of a waiter to get a glass of water and in Germany five orders and a fight." The great practical advantage to labor in America, he believes, arises from a better school system, freedom from military burdens, and a more liberal land policy.

Jeannette Marks, author of "A Holiday with the Birds" and other books, sailed this week for a long-desired European vacation. When the day of departure came, however, she told a group of friends: "I have just come from Maine where it is delightfully cool and where the smell of fern and pine and the song of the hermit-thrush make me homesick every time I realize that in twelve days I shall be in England."

The orders from a Japanese wholesale house show what sort of American books have a special appeal in Japan. In one recent order from the principal firm in Tokyo a book on civics, "How Americans are Governed," by Crittenden Marriot, heads the list in number of copies ordered. Second in quantity was "Curiosities of the Sky," by Garrett P. Serviss, and third, the works of Mark Twain. "Huckleberry Finn" and "Tom Sawyer" have had a steady sale in Japan for years.

The seventh series of Shakespeare Essays, by Paul Elmer More, which the Putnam will publish in the fall, contains papers on the following subjects: Shelley, Wordsworth, Hood, Tennyson, William Morris, Louis Bruce, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Francis Thompson, The Socialism of G. Lowes Dickinson, The Pragmatism of William James, Criticism, and Victorian Literature. All of the essays in this volume deal with subjects of the nineteenth century, and the last essay discusses more particularly the various movements of the Victorian Era.

George Schock has put in the pages of her new novel, "Hearts Contending," many glimpses of the quaint life of the Pennsylvania Germans. The novel is humorous as Ash Wednesday in the Hellighat—"on that day every house was cleaned from top to bottom, and the dust buried; every garden was covered with ashes, which were left until the spring rains washed them in to the ground; every cow was sprinkled with ashes, like a mourner in the Old Testament, and their long contemplative faces, thus oddly topped, stared out of barn-doors and over barnyard fences."

"The Real Roosevelt," a compilation of the forceful utterances of the ex-President, carefully selected and classified by Alan Warner, has just been published by the Putnam. The compiler has made accessible to every reader a first-hand knowledge of the ex-President's emphatic convictions concerning every subject on which he has brooded in his vigorous intellect. The material has been so arranged that every reader may readily find the particular phase of Roosevelt's varied activity in which he is particularly interested. The book, though it has only just been published, has already achieved for itself an unequalled position. At the recent dinner given to Colonel Roosevelt by the Camp-Fire Club at the Waldorf-Astoria, three hundred copies of the volume, with the imprint of the Club stamped on the front cover, were distributed among its members as souvenirs of the occasion.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

Old-fashioned poetry, but choicely good.

—Lucas Walton.

Loss of the Royal George

Tell for the brave!
The brave that are no more!
All sunk beneath the wave,
Fast by their native shore!

Eight hundred of the brave
Whose courage was as bold,
Had made the vessel heel
And laid her on her side.

A land-breeze shook the shrouds
And she was overcast;
Down went the Royal George,
With all her crew complete.

Tell for the brave!
Brave Keppelfelt is gone;
His last sea-flight is fought,
His work of glory done.

It was not in the battle;
No trumpet gave the shock;
He sprang no fatal leap,
She sank upon no rock.

His sword was in its sheath,
His fingers held the pen,
When Keppelfelt went down,
With twice four hundred men.

—Weigh the vessel up,
Once drenched by our foes!
And mingle with our cup
The tears that England weeps.

But Keppelfelt is gone,
His victories are o'er;
And he and his eight hundred
Shall plough the wave no more.

The annual Ripley excursion to Maline occurs next Sunday, and is an event which many of our citizens look forward to with much pleasure. Steam-er W. G. Butman leaves Tillson wharf promptly at 8 o'clock a. m.

The Thomaston Boys' Band are preparing a special high class concert program to be used as a setting for the Bushnell-De Beverly dramatic recital, which they present at Watts hall, Thomaston, on the evening of July 25.
Knox county cases have the right of way in Law Court at Portland today. Among the local attorneys in attendance are A. S. Littlefield, Frank B. Miller, County Attorney Howard, E. K. Gould, J. E. Moore and E. B. Burpee.

A quartet of Rockland Elks left Saturday for Detroit, Mich., where the national convention of the Elks is being held this week. In the party were Past Exalted Rulers W. W. Case and Fred J. Simonton, Jr. and A. J. Huston and A. T. Blackington.

Bert Croaker, who has been in the employ of Everett L. Spear, has returned to Boston. He comes back to Rockland in the fall after having attended high school. His advent there will be especially welcomed as he is a good basketball and baseball player.

An excursion from Belfast brought about 60 to Crescent Beach Sunday. The large number of automobile parties which visited the resort that day was the occasion of general comment. What better destination could an automobile party have, by the way?

A large crowd visited Oakland Park Sunday and those who were wise enough to camp in the ledges found relief from the intense heat. A Thomaston band and the Aurora quarter furnished music. The gospel meeting in the grove was addressed by Rev. B. P. Judd.

Maurice P. O'Connor of Lewiston, official solicitor of the Catholic Opinion, who has been working the local territory in the interest of that publication, has gone to Bangor. The Opinion is the only Catholic newspaper in Maine, and labors very faithfully in the interest of that denomination.

Invitations are out for the Thursday evening dance at Crescent Beach. This weekly dance has been a popular fixture for several years. The season at the beach is now nearing a climax, which means that there will be plenty of pretty girls at the dance, and plenty of gallant partners.

The Bangor city government's acceptance of the baseball challenge issued by Alderman Clark in behalf of Rockland, is good news for the fans, who foresee an abundance of fun and some excellent amateur work. Two games will be played by these teams during the summer, the first to take place on the Broadway ground, Saturday, July 23.

Sunday was no day of rest for the staff of the Rockland Produce Co., every member of which was assisting in removing the stock and fixtures from Farwell opera house block to the new quarters at the rear of that building. It was a hot day for a task of that sort, the employees of the concern are willing workers, and the transfer was made in an incredibly short time.

Among the city's energetic old ladies should be mentioned Mrs. Caroline Schwartz, Main street. Mrs. Schwartz is nearly 84, and during the berry season last year picked about 100 quarts of blueberries. Last fall in one half day she gathered sufficient apples to fill six sugar barrels. Mrs. Schwartz frequently walks three miles in a day, and says she could walk to Camden with ease if it were necessary. Her favorite occupation is making the upper part of quirts, three of which she completes in four weeks, and for which she finds a ready sale. She assists her daughter by doing light housework, and enjoys amusements as much as a person much younger.

Ralph R. Ulmer Camp is well represented in the Maine department of United Spanish War Veterans. George Stewart is department marshal and Philip Howard is a member of the council of administration. William I. Stirling and O. M. Jenkins have been appointed adjutant and quartermaster of the department, with headquarters in Waterville. In closing his first general order Department Commander McCarty wishes to express his gratitude to the comrades of the department of Maine for the confidence reposed in him and to assure them that it is his purpose to do all in his power to build up our department during the coming year. In this work he asks the hearty cooperation of every comrade in the department.

J. H. Mesorvey is very busy these days, for his Ice Cream is finding a large sale both at his store and at residences. It is the best. Delivered to order.

Your guests like their friends to know that they are in the city. The Courier-Gazette personal column is glad to get the information.

George W. Bachelder, Jr.'s Emily Gale is entered in the 234 and W. E. Perry's Pilot Nelsén in the 223 Central Maine Fair stake races.

Rockland Lodge of Elks is to have its annual outing at Vinhaven in the week of Aug. 22 at which time Bath Elks will be entertained. The entertainment committee is in charge of the outing but all of the brothers are pulling together to make it a success—which it undoubtedly will be.

The annual examination of candidates for state certificates of superintendence grade will be held at Augustus, Friday, July 29, at 8:15 a. m. All persons wishing to take this examination and thereby to qualify for the position of superintendents of towns comprising school unions, should apply at once for registering blanks and circulars of information.

The fine-looking photograph that visitors to The Courier-Gazette office are admiring, is that of our old friend and former schoolmate, John A. Brickley, now a captain on the Boston police force, a position to which he has steadily arisen through long years of faithful and efficient service upon the force. A few months ago a sketch of Capt. Brickley's successful career was printed in these columns.

Dr. H. M. Robbins, who recently removed from this city, is now located at 148 Court street, Boston. He is a member of the Harvard Dental Co., which purposes to establish a chain of dental offices in Massachusetts and Rhode Island. In addition to the Boston office the concern already has one in Salem.

There now seems to be little likelihood that J. B. Pearson & Co. will locate its manufacturing plant in this city. The Board of Trade put forth a reasonable amount of inducement, but the letter that it longed for never came. An investigation of the concern showed it to have a good financial standing, although rather a smaller proposition than had been supposed. It looks as though Rockland would have to be content with its new stoneyard and sardine factory this season.

There is a strong likelihood that Rockland will get a glimpse of President Taft this month. He is coming to Maine in the yacht Mayflower, leaving Beverly, Mass. the 18th. His itinerary is expected to include Portland, Bath, Rockland and Bar Harbor. No President has visited this section of the Maine coast since the days of General Grant. The lamented McKinley took part in the Knox county campaign once, but that was before he became President.

At a special meeting of the city council last night an order was passed for the construction of the following concrete walks: Rockland, Trinity, Elm, Orange, and Franklin streets, Summer street (Lincoln to Beech); Main street, (Holmes to Hall and Clarendon to Carroll's Lane). It was also voted to concrete the surface of Elm street.

An order for the removal of the standpipe on Park street, to some more convenient place, was referred to the street committee.

The order for an issue of 2 1/2 percent refunding bonds was reconsidered, and in its place there was passed an order for a 4 percent issue—this course being deemed advisable by the finance committee.

An agreement was made between the Lime Rock Railroad and city, whereby the sewer may be extended across Washington street to tide water.

The lofty elm trees on the Tillson premises, occupied by W. F. White, are being carefully pruned. This is one of the largest and best kept estates in eastern Maine.

The Congregational Fair will be held Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 3 and 4.
Persons wishing to consult G. T. Holt, eye-sight specialist, now at No. 22 School street, Post Office Square, should do so at once, as his stay is limited. Appointments preferred. Telephone 519-13.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Association of Boston will make a three hours' stay in this city Oct. 2, en route for Bangor and Mt. Kineo. It is hoped that a parade will be given. John D. The Atlantic cable steamer Clearway is due here from New York to complete the laying of the telephone cable from Rockland to North Haven, which was interrupted some weeks ago by the discovery that the line was not of sufficient length. The seaward end was buoyed until such time as the work could be completed, which will probably be this week.

The management at Dreamland succeeds in keeping up the high class of pictures and vaudeville. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Marks and Young, eccentric dancing comedians are the vaudeville artists; for Wednesday and Thursday they have a big feature biograph picture. They round out the week with Prestcow and Beauchard, novelty comedy eccentrics. The electric fans run all the time.

Dr. M. J. O'Connor, who established here in general practice several months ago, is now located in his new office, 23 Oak street, where he will give prompt attention to old and new patients. COLOSSAL ARCTURUS

The Fourth Brightest Star in All the Heavens.

IN REALITY A MONSTER SUN.

It is Thought to Be at Least a Hundred Times Larger Than Our Sun in Diameter and is About Nine Hundred and Fifty Million Miles Distant.

Most of us are prone to think of our sun as being the largest body in the heavens, the grand high lord of all the little planets and the twinkling stars. Such is very far from being the case. Practically all of the fixed and twinkling stars are as large as, and some even larger than, our own sun. They appear small only because of their great distance, for they are just as truly suns with families of planets flying around them as is our central orb.

There is one of these stars in particular that has attracted the attention of astronomers, not only on account of its great size, but also its enormous distance from our solar system. This is the star Arcturus. To have some conception of the almost inconceivable distance that separates it from us the astronomical standard of measuring distance must be comprehended. Now, light does not come from a luminous body instantaneously to our eyes. It takes time to come. Because it is a wave motion in a medium. The velocity of light as most recently determined is about 186,000 miles a second. Multiply this by the number of seconds in a year and we have a distance known in astronomy as a light year. Therefore when a star is, say, six trillion miles away we say it is one light year off, which means that the light from the star takes one year to reach us. It may be of some interest to know that there is no fixed star less than ten light years away, or sixty trillion miles. This is the one known as Alpha Centauri. Most of the stars are much farther away than that, Arcturus being the farthest one measured to date.

Arcturus is thought to be at least a hundred times larger than the sun in diameter. That would make it 100,000 times larger in surface, or the dimension that is ordinarily compared. By means of the photometer its brightness has been determined to be 6,200 times that of the sun. It is the fourth brightest star in all the heavens. Sirius, the dog star, being first in brightness. As regards the distance from us, it has been found to be a little over 100 light years, or 650 trillion miles. This distance, of course, cannot be conceived by mortal man, it is so stupendous and amazing. However, one can get a slight idea of it by means of an everyday analogy. Think of the fastest express train going at the rate of 100 miles an hour toward such a star and compute the time it would take. It is found to be in round numbers exactly 120,000 years! Now, as we know that it has taken its light so long to come to us and as there are a great many stars whose distance has never been measured exactly, but which have been computed to be approximately several million light years away, we have absolute proof of the great age of the world and the stellar universe.

The elements composing the sun Arcturus are, peculiarly enough, very nearly the same as our sun. As it is one of the most wonderful and astounding things that a scientist can tell what a star so far away is composed of, a small explanation of the modus operandi would not come amiss here. It is done by means of a small instrument known as the spectroscopic which consists of glass prisms so arranged as to split up the light falling on them into its constituent parts. Now, every substance has the power to cause a certain color or line in the spectroscopic if it is in a luminous condition, so this instrument is simply pointed at the star whose composition is sought, and if any line is found that corresponds to a substance that we know about we assume that this substance is found in the star examined.

Another interesting thing is the method pursued in determining the great distance of the stars. This is done by determining their parallax or angle made at the star between two rays from the star striking at two different points in space. As the greatest distance that we can measure off in this way and still take the angle is the diameter of the earth's orbit, that distance is invariably used. It is at most 200,000,000 miles, but that, as is seen, is very small compared with the enormous distance of the star. Now the angle thus measured from Arcturus is only two-hundredths of a second! When it is remembered that there are 90 seconds in a minute, 60 minutes in a degree and 90 degrees in a circle, it is at once seen that a small angle the parallax is and how careful the astronomer has to be in his observations. Indeed, for a long time, before modern delicate measuring instruments were invented, no star's distance could be found, for "it" was seemingly no angle formed, and thus the old scientists had to assume the star to be at infinity.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

WHAT WILL BALLOT DO?

That Is the First Question to Be Considered, Says a Leading Suffragette.

In discussing the suffrage movement for women many are apt to consider only the effect of women upon the ballot. Opponents of woman's suffrage point out that woman knows little of politics; that she will be ruled by sentiment; that her husband, her father, her sweetheart, will influence her; that she will sell her ballot for a box of bonbons and that many other evils will follow, all because she will not consider the matter seriously.

But a leading English suffragette now in this country, who has toured England in a van speaking for the cause, says the first thing to her mind to be considered is the effect of the ballot upon women. This she thinks will be altogether beneficial. Women who are shallow, indifferent or lazy may vote as their men folk dictate. But the great mass of American women do not belong to this class, and they are, above all things, conscientious. They do not shirk their duty. If a new responsibility is placed upon them they will measure up to it. This, says the Englishwoman, will broaden and develop them.

The majority of American women if the vote comes to them will not use it without attempting to know something on the subject, thinks this English cousin. They are not so superficial and addle-pated. To know they must read, study, observe. To do this will be of greatest benefit to them and as a result to the community. Let a woman begin to look into school and municipal management, into conditions of working women and children as affected by political mismanagement, into the question of taxation without representation, which is the state under which women own property live, and her outlook on life is bound to grow immeasurably larger. Whether she is a wife or whether she is a wage earner, it will help her ultimately to manage her share of things more intelligently. A woman is a better mother, better able to bring up her children wisely, for having a wider horizon. And no sensible, sane woman will neglect her home and children for these things. Because a few hysterical women may do so is no reason for blocking the road of development to all women.

OLD GAMBLING CLUBS

Famous Resorts of the Betting Fraternity in London.

THE WAY FOX WAS TRICKED

A Scheme That Allowed Him to Be Cheated by Lord Barrymore-Water's, Commanded by Lord Byron and Patronized by Beau Brummel.

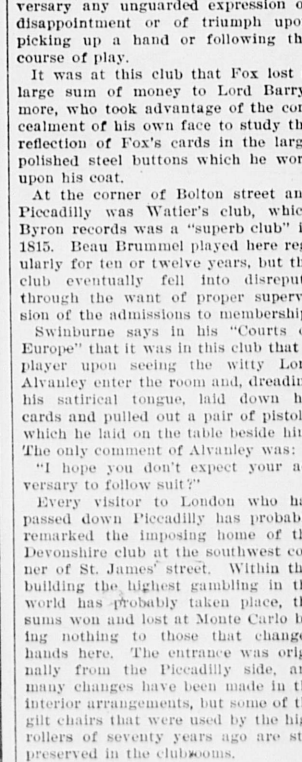

In America such a thing as a proprietary club owned and managed by one man is almost unknown. In London it is the usual thing, and almost all the medium sized clubs which are devoted to some special purpose, such as card playing, are proprietary.

In the old days this was a money making enterprise, and some immense fortunes were piled up by the proprietors of London card clubs. But now whenever a club shows signs of unusual prosperity the members get together and insist on forming some sort of governing body which shall have power to pass upon the proposals for membership. They also see to it that the proprietor should be a proper person of his own accord, and the comfort of the members instead of putting everything in his pocket.

The fashions in the card clubs continually change with the years and with the games that are the rage. A century ago it was against the rules in many of the best clubs to play cards before dinner, whereas now a municipal management, into conditions of working women and children as affected by political mismanagement, into the question of taxation without representation, which is the state under which women own property live, and her outlook on life is bound to grow immeasurably larger. Whether she is a wife or whether she is a wage earner, it will help her ultimately to manage her share of things more intelligently. DENTED HIS DIGNITY.

The Cook's Familiarity With the Captain Was Ill Timed.

Enos Slisbee and Ethan Knight came from the same little town on the coast of Maine. As boys they had grown up together, and now as men they were sailing together on the same schooner. Ethan was captain, and Enos was the cook. Their positions might well have been reversed, for Ethan was better with the skill than Enos, and Enos probably knew as much about navigation as his friend.

Usually on board the Maria there was little familiarity between the captain and the crew. In port, however, and on certain occasions it was thought necessary to maintain the dignity of office.

One day a naval officer came on board on some business. Captain Knight received him in his best manner, thanking his stars that he happened to have his good coat on when the officer arrived unexpectedly.

In the midst of their interview in the captain's cabin Enos, apron tied behind, as was his wont when not very busy, poked his head in at the door.

"Ethan," he said, "where's the saucepan?"

But the captain frowned, and the officer looked at once surprised and in different.

"Your conduct is amazing, sir," the captain said in his most dignified manner. "Your saucepan must be where you left it."

"You had it last," protested Enos. "You said you cooked dinner."

But the captain had slammed the door.—Youth's Companion.

INVADING A MOSQUE.

Roughed Methods of Sightseers in Turkey.

Albert Bigelow Paine says in describing a visit to a Constantinople mosque: "Some kind of ceremony was in progress when we arrived; but, as usual in such places, we did not mind. We went right in just the same, and our guides, too, and we talked and pointed and did what we could to break up the services. Old turbaned sons of the prophet were kneeling and bowing and praying here and there and were a good deal in the way. Sometimes we fell over them, but we were charitably disposed and did not kick them—at least I didn't. We might kick a dog—kick at him, I mean. We tripped over one, but we do not kick a Moslem—not a live one. We only take his picture and step on him and muss him up and make a few notes and go."

"I have been wondering what would happen to a party of tourists—Moslems, for instance—who broke into an American church during services. An American church during services, and stared at the people who were saying their prayers and stalked over them as if they were wax figures. An American congregation would be annoyed by a mob like that and would remove it and put it in the calaboose. But, then, such things wouldn't happen in America. We have cowed our foreign visitors. Besides, there is nothing in an American church that a foreigner would care to see."—Outing.

Going Astray at Sea. The difficulty of keeping a modern steamship on a straight course is no slight one. The helmsman steers by the compass, and, while a single degree of deviation appears very small on the compass card, it would if continued every first steership four miles out of her course in a single day's run. Yet the compass gives the course more accurately than the ship can be steered. Owing to the deflecting power of the waves and the rolling of the ship, which if she is of the twin screw type causes first one of her propellers and then the other to exert greater effect, the course is continually shifted a little this way and that despite the helm. The only safety is in correcting the compass course by frequent observations of the sun, moon and stars.—New York Tribune.

Leaves It to Her Judgment. "Am I the first girl you ever kissed?" asks the fair young thing from the refuge of his shoulder.

Well, he replies, "after the way my arm just naturally slipped around your waist as you unconsciously leaned toward me and my fingers tilted your chin as you unconsciously lifted your head and I bent forward where your lips were waiting and didn't get the kiss either on your nose or your chin, but where it belonged—after all that, and with the knowledge of the subject which you have displayed, I shall say nothing, except that I leave the question to your own judgment."—Life.

Saving His Mate. On one occasion at a crowded performance at the Royal theater in Sydney, N. S. W., a number of years ago a couple of sailors who had been drinking were seated in the gallery. One lost his balance and fell into the stalls. The other immediately cried, "Man overboard!" and dived after his companion. With the proverbial luck of drunken sailors the first escaped with a broken leg and the second without a scratch.

COLD WATER MUSIC.

How to Produce Melody From Ordinary Tumblers.

This is an old amusement, but only those who have tried it know how much melody may lurk in a glass of water. If you have eight thin tumblers of the same size and shape you may make a musical scale easily. Each tumbler contains a certain amount of cold water, more or less, according to the volume of sound required. This you may find out practically by dipping your finger in the water and drawing it briskly around and around the sharp outer rim of your glass. This produces a musical note.

The fuller the glass the deeper the note. The swift motion of the finger around the edge produces a vibration on the surface of the water, particularly if the edge is thin and clean cut.

The glasses, with graduated amounts of water, might be placed in regular scale order on a table covered with both cloth and table felt. At each glass put a performer with a good ear for music and a steady middle finger, which is the best and strongest to use. Each glass must be held firmly near the bottom, so as not to mar the sound with the forefinger and thumb of the left hand. In this way all familiar airs may be produced with some really sweet vibrations if you know how to use your finger to the best advantage.—Chicago News.

The Forks and the Coin. Place two forks with their prongs one set over the other and slip a coin between the middle prongs of the forks. Then place the coin flat on the rim of a wineglass or tumbler, pushing it outward until the two circumferences are touching externally. In this position, as shown in the illustration, the fork will remain in equilibrium, and the water may be poured steadily from the glass into another without disturbing the coin or the two forks.

Conundrums. Why is a butcher's cat like his top boots? Because he carries his calves there.

Why does a cat rest better in summer? Because summer brings a cat a pillow.

Why do American soldiers never run away? Because they belong to a standing army.

Why does a slow horse to a post improve his pace? It makes him fast.

What is it that every man over looks? His nose.

What word of ten letters can be spelled with five? XPNDNC (expediently).

New Blind Man's Buff. Here's a new kind of playing "blind man's buff." It is not so exciting as the old way, but it is a good deal quieter. Stretch a sheet across a doorway and in front of it some distance away put a lighted candle. The "blind man" sits out in the passage facing the sheet. Then all the other children pass, one at a time, in front of the candle so that their shadows fall on the sheet. The "blind man" has to try and guess whose shadows they are, and when he guesses right the one he has discovered changes places with him and becomes "blind man." Those passing before the sheet are at liberty to make faces or limp or otherwise change their appearance so as to make their recognition more difficult.

Game For Outdoors. A good outdoor game is "den." Each boy or girl must represent a wild beast and choose a separate tree for his "den."

The game is to see how many beasts can start out on a foraging expedition and return to their "dens" without being captured—i. e., tagged. The moment a beast leaves his "den" any other beast is at liberty to try to capture him. If any beast does capture him the captor cannot be tagged while he is dragging his captive to his own "den." Once there, the captive must identify himself with his master and help him try to capture other beasts. The one who captures the largest number wins.

Random Puzzles. If the B in B put some; but if the B (if the grate be empty put some coal on, but if the grate be full stop).

I can stretch my arms apart, having a coin in each hand, and yet without bringing my hands together I can cause both coins to come into the same hand. How is this to be done? Place the coin on a table, then, turning round, take it up with the other hand. A person tells another that he can put something into his right hand which the other cannot put into his left. The last person's left elbow.

Add 1 to 9 and make it 20. IX—cross the I; it makes XX.

A Riddle. A cavern dark and long. Whence issue wall and song. A red bridge moat and strong. Where white robed millers throng? Answer.—The mouth, tongue and teeth.

A Few Short Verses. Mr. J. S. Bartlett, Edwardsville, Ill., writes: "A few months ago my kidneys became congested. I had severe backache and pain across the kidneys and hips. Foley's Kidney Pills promptly cured my backache and corrected the action of my kidneys. This was brought about after my using them for only a few short weeks and I can cheerfully recommend them." F. Passing of Famous Black Horse Cavalry—Its Passing Due to New Methods and not to Purification of Politics, However—Buying Wood by the Ton as Beef-steak and Lamb—Strange Search for a Toe—Bridge-Jumping Craze in Fall Swing.

New York, July 9.—With the passing of the anti-race track gambling bills by the legislature, practically sounding the death-knell of racing in this state, there passes also, but in another sense, the famous Black Horse Cavalry whose hoofs have worn for many a year a smooth road at Albany for the work of bribery and corruption. The cavalry with the sinister name has been operating at Albany for more years than most people living today can remember and they have made some famous raids. But while predatory legislation is by no means an art, corruptive forces in the future will have to travel under a new name and use different methods. Just how the peculiar name of Black Horse Cavalry, now sinking into oblivion, originated is a story not generally known. It first became current shortly after the civil war as a result of the activities of a certain regiment known by this name, just as after the Spanish War the Rough Riders leaped into fame. The raids made by corrupt legislators at Albany against meritorious legislation brought them the name of the famous regiment and it has stuck ever since. One of the most picturesque methods used by the cavalry was the lobby poker game. This game was invented for application in cases where legislative consciences were too sensitive to permit of the outright acceptance of a bribe. The lobbyist in practicing this method started a game at the psychological time and sat in with a number of legislators he desired to reach. The rest was easy, simply involving the losing of money which would otherwise have been frankly handed over as a bribe. But the methods are changed, and it is to this game and not to any purification of politics that the passing of the famous Black Horse Cavalry may be attributed.

For incumbents of this office in rural fields. Even this sort of supply, however, seems to promise poorly, since the first man from that district to join the canine eliminating force served just one day, resigning after a most adventurous ten hours experience. During that brief period he was bitten six times and knocked down once, working up to a thrilling climax after being bitten by a dozen different dogs beginning with a foxterrier and ending with a Newfoundland, all of which he tried to apprehend, since the dog catcher is paid one dollar for each animal that he gets, and if a day is not to be entirely wasted he must have something to show for his effort. After six unsuccessful attempts the new man netted a pup belonging to a husky negress who promptly hit him on the jaw. His next act after recovering consciousness in the hospital was to resign.

The annual bridge-jumping craze has struck the city a bit ahead of schedule this year, and with three structures now spanning the East River the police are kept busy heading off would-be imitators of Steve Brodie, the man who gained considerable fame by leaping from Brooklyn Bridge to the water 135 feet below a good many years ago. In spite of the best efforts of the guardians of the peace, however, no less than six persons have made the jumps so far this summer. Were it not for the fact that the majority of them are merely seeking notoriety, the number would be much greater. Nine out of ten of them, however, before making the jump take the precaution to telephone to one or more newspapers explaining their intentions in the hope of getting thrilling descriptions of their leaps. As a result, the papers, cooperating with the police, are able to nip most of the attempts in the bud. But in spite even of this, the present summer bids fair to set a new bridge-jumping record.

Fought Catarrh for 20 Years

Here is a letter that we sincerely ask every reader of The Courier-Gazette to read. If you suffer from catarrh or any nose, throat or lung ailment, read it over twice, and then consider if you can afford to ignore a prescription with the healing virtue of Hyomel (pronounce it High-o-mel).

Booth's Hyomel Co., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:—"I suffered terribly with catarrh in the head for twenty years, and I tried many prescriptions, but never found relief. I have used Hyomel for two weeks and find it the best preparation I have ever used for catarrh. Every cold I would catch seemed to go to my throat, and I had to use gargles for days at a time. Now when I catch a cold in the throat I use the Hyomel inhaler and this soreness disappears over night. Hyomel has put me on the good road to getting rid of my catarrh, and if you want to use this letter to publish in your advertising, do so. Perhaps it will help some other sufferer.—W. K. SQUARING THE CIRCLE.

An Ancient Problem That Has Turned Many Brains Dizzy.

The oldest of problems is that of squaring the circle—i. e., of telling the precise length of the side of a square whose area will equal the area of a given circle.

The first attempt we know of was made 500 years before the exodus of the Jews. Since at least 1300 B. C. Chinese brains have turned dizzy over it. The oldest mathematical book in the world—written about 2000 B. C. by Ahmes, scribe to an Egyptian king, and now resting in the British museum—pretends to solve it, but it doesn't. Our old friend Euclid prudently avoids the subject.

Books have been written to prove that it is impossible, others to prove the impossibility of proving its impossibility, others again to prove the impossibility of proving its possibility.

One scientist, a professor of Zurich, adopted some fifty years ago a rather original method of tackling the problem. He divided the floor of a great left into thousands of small squares and spent his days in solemnly turning needles about and noting the number of times they fell clear of the chalk lines, but it did not help him much.

The important ratio which would settle the question has been carried to 500 places of decimals. And still it is not exact. If you have a taste for sums you can start and carry it to 600 and see what happens.

At any rate, you will soon find your hair getting grayer.—London Answers.

Second Thought.

"Dear Mr. Hicks," she wrote, "I am very sorry that what you ask I cannot grant. I cannot become your wife. Yours sincerely, Ethel Harrows." Then she added: "P. S.—On second thought, dear George, I think I will marry you. Do come up tonight and see your own true Ethel."

A Subtle Difference.

"And so," began the browbeating attorney to the shabby witness, "you live by your wits, do you?"

"No, sir," replied the witness modestly.

"He knew."

'Foley Kidney Pills Have Cured Me'

The above is a quotation from a letter written by H. M. Winkler, Evansville, Ind., who contracted a severe case of kidney trouble. My back gave out and pained me. THE UNION CONCERT.

The concert given at Town hall, Union, last Thursday evening furnished a rare treat to all present.

There was a large and enthusiastic audience of the townspeople as well as a large number of friends from Belfast, Rockland and adjoining towns.

Mrs. Frederick A. Greene (nee Edith Bease) has a well-known reputation as a finished violinist and pianist and her skill was shown to excellent advantage, both in the rendition of a beautiful violin solo and in the difficult role of accompanist.

Mr. Greene delighted all present with the marvelous brilliancy with which he executed several solos, showing him to be a violinist of high rank. His father was a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra, and he belongs to a distinctly musical family.

All were charmed with Miss Marion Wells' rare and beautiful voice. It was a revelation to the audience, and we predict for her a career of exceptional promise.

Mrs. Georgia Burrows-Parker was warmly welcomed to her home town, and showed marked ability in her readings, which were greatly enjoyed by all present as shown by the hearty applause.

Altogether it was an evening long to be remembered, and it is hoped that it may be repeated in the near future.

The city building is in the hands of Clifford & Carl's painters.

Good selections of speakers have been made for the use of the Maine Naval Militia in August, had been assigned to the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Lieut. Commander Guy L. Weymouth of the Maine Naval Militia received word Friday that the two divisions in that city and the new division in Rockland would make the annual cruise on the battleship New Hampshire instead of on board the battleship Louisiana. Several weeks ago Lieut. Weymouth was notified that the Maine sailor boys would make their cruise on the Louisiana. The change from the Louisiana to the New Hampshire is a welcome one for the Portland boys, as they made the cruise last year on that ship and enjoyed their trip very much.

There has been a rumor circulated in Portland that the monitor Puritan, which was expected to come to Portland for the use of the Maine Naval Militia in August, had been assigned to the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Lieut. Weymouth wired Commander Marsh in regard to the matter and Friday received a reply. Commander Marsh said that the Puritan is at Norfolk, and that an inspection would soon be made of the vessel. He said that he did not know of any rumors about the Puritan being assigned to Annapolis and that a board meeting would soon be held when it would be decided if the Puritan would be sent to Portland.
